

Research on sepsis survivorship impacts national policy efforts to improve sepsis care and outcomes

Dr. Hallie Prescott's past and present research on sepsis has led to significant impacts on national policy.

CURRENT WORK
OveR-Sepsis
 HSR&D funded IIR
 (MPI: Hallie Prescott, Jeremy Sussman)

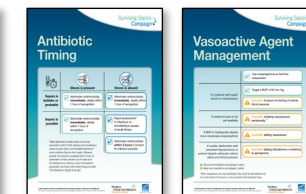

- Meets an urgent clinical need in VA, enhancing the recovery of the thousands of Veterans who survive sepsis each year (including viral sepsis from COVID).
- Will validate best practices for enhancing recovery from sepsis that are responsive to Veteran and caregiver perspectives and identify feasible strategies for implementation.

ONGOING
CMS 30-day Mortality Measure for Community Onset Sepsis
 Performance measure in development. Dr. Prescott serves as the VA representative on the External CMS Advisory Committee.

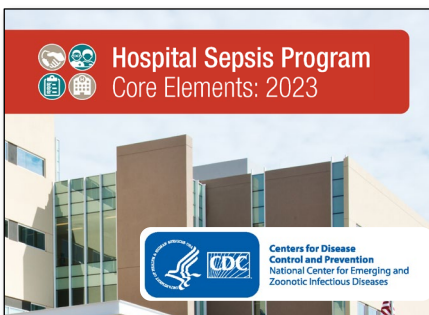

New Recommendations to Improve Sepsis Outcomes
 The Infectious Diseases Society of America and a coalition of medical professional societies released recommendations for modifying the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services sepsis metrics to improve sepsis care and outcomes. Each year, more than 1.7 million U.S. adults receive hospital care for sepsis, and more than 250,000 American adults die of sepsis, spurring clinicians, hospitals, policymakers and patient advocates to action.
